Old days! old days! how happy they

When youth and hope were thine!

When flowers swung bright on every bush,

And every bird sang sweetly in the trees.

When all the meadow-land was fair,

The mountains rose in grand array.

And joyfully we looked on the scene,

Wouldst thou of hope unfold!

Old dreams! old dreams! how fancy we

How colors rich and rare!

Brighter than all the sunlit haze

That decked the morning air.

Their magic power I cherish yet,

The tale I love to tell.

Although it's sad and dreary

I know full well—full well!

Old faces, too, how bright they shine

Three memory's mellow haze!

And joyfully we look on the scene,

Wouldst thou of hope unfold!

The days may pass, and dreams may die,

The stars may fade from the sky.

The happy stars that shine on me

From out of memory's sky!

The stars may fade from the sky.

THE COURIER'S RIDE.

BY DANIEL KNIGHT.

It was the night before the battle of Shiloh, and we lay a few miles below Pittsburg

Landing. Buell's forces had been gathering, preparatory to joining General Grant.

I was in the ranks of the Illinois Cavalry,

and I was waiting for the morning.

In the following details I shall only narrate the part which I acted personally, leaving the army and its movements to the historians.

It was the evening before the battle that a General unknown to me, belonging to Buell's army, called me and asked to what company I belonged. My name, Captain's name, and company, all of which I understand, he noted. My answer, I can not remember. He then asked me to go with him to the headquarters of the army, and he said: "I am General Nelson, and I am a volunteer courier. If I can get on the line, I will be a very useful man."

I replied that I was willing to undertake the duty when properly detailed and instructed. My answer seemed to please him.

He answered: "As soon as possible go to the headquarters of the army, and see the General. He will be waiting for you."

This seemed like a strange speech, coming from a stranger whom I had never seen before, but, once having seen, not liable to forget.

He was a large, fleshy, sharp-spoken

man, and his words carried authority with

me. It was now getting toward night, and I soon after left the line and went to camp. I had fed my horse, and was making up my tent, when I saw a man on horseback, and I saw that he was a General.

I went up to him, and he said: "I am

General Nelson, and I am a volunteer courier.

If I can get on the line, I will be a very useful man." I replied that I was willing to undertake the duty when properly detailed and instructed. My answer seemed to please him. He answered: "As soon as possible go to the headquarters of the army, and see the General. He will be waiting for you." This seemed like a strange speech, coming from a stranger whom I had never seen before, but, once having seen, not liable to forget.

He was a large, fleshy, sharp-spoken

man, and his words carried authority with

A pure, clean joke is a happy thing; but it were well if the young could be taught that a joke which carries a sting, or contains an element of meanness, reflects upon its perpetrator, and degrades him in the estimation of every lady and gentleman in the community.

The M. C. R. R. will run a special train on the morning of the fifth from Grayling to Cheboygan. The train will leave Grayling about 5:30 and Cheboygan at 8:30. One fare for round trip. This will enable the residents along the line to enjoy the great celebration and return home on the same day.

A dance will be given by W. W. Metcalf and Clara Hadley at the Opera House, on next Monday afternoon, and in the evening. Ten cents a set will be charged in the afternoon, and fifty cents for a ticket at night. Good music and callers will be furnished. Refreshments can be procured at Saunders' Restaurant.

Thomas Lound and wife, of Crawford County, were guests of re. editor and family a couple of days this week. Mr. Lound was up for examination before the United States Pension Board Wednesday, he being an old veteran of the war. His health is quite poorly of late, the infirmities of age together with the rough exposure during the war having made sad inroads on his otherwise vigorous constitution.—Otsego Co. Herald.

S. Huff, of Cheney, who keeps a general store in that place, states that weather is good for the time or year, and that it is gradually increasing. He does not write p. m. after his name at present, as the powers that be have reduced him to the ranks, and appointed in his place a follower of the present dynasty. Mr. H. has some as fine looking fruit trees as grow in any locality, and if the frost had not been so severe would have had a nice crop of fruit.

Some one without the fear of the law or danger from fire, knocked the ashes out of his pipe in the saw-dust banked up against the store of Dr. Traver. It churred a board to the depth of half an inch and spread in saw-dust from six to eight inches. Without fire-protection of any kind, and the large supply of innocent numskulls who go around smoking pipes and who care not where they knock the ashes out, it will not be long before Grayling will go up in smoke.

The first annual commencement of Grayling Graded School was celebrated at the Opera House on Friday evening. The stage was beautifully decorated with flowers, and the program was listened to throughout with close attention by the largest assembly ever congregated in the room. The essays and orations were well written and finely delivered and the music was excellent. That our school is deserving a place in the front rank is generally acknowledged and we believe the continued encouragement of its patrons will continue it in its progressive course.

On last Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wild gave a surprise birthday party to their granddaughter, Miss Bessie Merrill, of Birmingham. She received numerous gifts from her young friends appropriate to the occasion. The party was a very successful one and was attended by the following parties: The Misses were represented by Matilda, Maggie and Emma Hanson; Nora Masters; Vena and Josie Jones; Clara Lankenaw; Bessie Mickelson; Allie Hadley; Nertie Traver; Orpha Henry; Mary Mantz; Ethel Ratnay; Ida Edgumbe and Kitty Cameron. The young folks were represented by Masters F. O'Beir; Eugene Thayer; A. Traver; W. Lankenaw; F. Bell; M. Hanson; J. E. Hartwick; A. Burdham; W. Masters; F. Mickelson and E. Salling. Dancing and playing were engaged in by the young people until 11 o'clock, when they were regaled with a collation of ice cream, strawberries, cake, candies, nuts, lemonade and other confections. It was a pleasant party and was well enjoyed by the young people and even by those of a more mature age, who were present by invitation of the entertainers.

That the "boys in blue" have nothing to hope for from this administration is evinced by the votes of the president on the morning of his wedding day, a day that one would suppose that if ever in his heart there would be a sympathetic chord touched, then would be the time. The contrary has been shown to be the case.—Cheboygan Tribune.

Change of Firm.

To the inhabitants of Grayling and vicinity:

Having sold out our stock etc., to Mr. W. H. James, we take this opportunity to thank the citizens of Grayling and surrounding country for the very liberal support which they have given us, and would respectfully ask all those that are indebted to the undersigned to please call and settle their accounts at once and greatly oblige.

Yours Most Respectfully,

JOS. H. EDGUMBE & CO.

Having bought out the above firm I would respectfully ask a continuance of the generous support extended to my predecessors. It will be my aim to sell first class goods at just a living profit, and I will endeavor to keep on hand a general stock, so that I can sell you anything that you want. So please don't forget Edgumbe's old stand.

Yours, anxiously to please,

W. H. JAMES.

The St. Nicholas.

The July number of the St. Nicholas is not lacking in patriotism, and opens with an interesting sketch of "La Fayette" and his two visits to America, which is in a way supplementary to Horace E. Scudder's "George Washington," this month's chapter of which dealt with the Monwye Cabul, Valley Forge, and Conway, in which La Fayette took a prominent part.

The leading feature of the number however, is undoubtedly the first installment of Rose Latimore Alving's short serial, "Nan's Revolt."

Ripley Hitchcock has a timely article on "Fly-fishing for Trout," in which he shows how base and sick can become proficients in this attractive sport, and how, when away from streams and lakes, they can practice fly-casting on the front lawn.

Among other prominent features of the magazine are the entertaining chapters of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" with a startling development to be continued. Some more notes on "Wonders of the Alphabet," and a "Ready-for-Business" article on "Boat-building" as an employment for American boys.

Palmer Cox tells about the "Brownies in the Menagerie," and other poems, verses, stories, and illustrations are contributed by Mary Hullock Foote, Alfred Brennan, Frank Dempster Sherman, John R. Coryell, F. H. Langner, Grace Lenio Littlefield, Malcolm Douglas, Rev. Charles R. Talbot, and others.
